

Bitter Sisters is more than a peer-celebrated, multi award-winning brewery with a World Beer Cup Gold medal, it's a public house in every sense of the term. It's a second home where local Addison residents meet to chat, learn, love, cheer, play, celebrate and sometimes cry. Mark Brumback (owner) also owns Grocery Services North here in Addison, which is a provider of healthy nutritional services for children of struggling expectant and new mothers. When asked why he decided to purchase the brewery he cited that "Bitter Sisters is a great brand but a better beer. In a town pro-business Town that's centrally located, this was a no brainer!" Mark, his business partner Forres McGraw and spouse Joanie McGraw are also longtime patrons of Bitter Sisters. They understand, appreciate, value and respect the rich history of this brewery as they and many of us locals have spent a decade there. Having begun brewing in 2015, Bitter Sisters is celebrating their 10 year anniversary (and their 10th year in Addison), in the month of April.

Mark's daughter, Ashley Brumback, a trained/certified brewer and social media expert utilizes both skills at the brewery. Ashley respectfully maintains the quality of the craft created by the former and beloved brewer/owner Matt Ehinger. All the while, she has injected a new energy with her creative and fresh approach to thinking outside the box recipes that are delighting patrons new and old.

If you've visited Bitter Sisters before, welcome back home and if you haven't your second home awaits.
